Headings

<h1> </h1>
<h2> </h2>
<h3> </h3>

These are H tags (H for headings)
There are 6 levels of headings. H1, H2, H3, ...
H1 is the largest heading (supposed to be, depending on how the fonts are set up) and H6 is the smallest heading.

H tags are already set up for font, size, color, bold, line spacing.

We use H1 for the titles of stories and titles of other pages. It is green and bold.
We use H2 for the headings on the home page - these are a little smaller than the H1 size. It is green and bold.
We use H3 for sub-headings within the stories pages. It is black and bold.
We use h4 for subheadings on resource and program description pages. It is the same font as h3 but is rust colored and bold.

Rule: Titles of stories are no more than one line. If the author makes them too long to take up two lines, shorten them to fit on one line.